TURKEY

Whether you want to raise turkey for meat or you just want a new pet to keep around the homestead, Sugar Feather Farm is here to help. We specialize in heritage breeds of turkeys. These turkeys are able to naturally reproduce, raise their young, and taste better than the commercial breeds. Turkeys are a lot of fun.

HERITAGE TURKEY

Country of Origin: USA

Primary Use: Meat, Pets

Bird Size: 14-23 lbs

Egg Production: seasonal layers (spring-summer)

Egg Size: X-Large

Egg Color: pale cream to medium brown with spotting

Hardiness: hardy

Temperament: calm disposition, good maternal abilities, early maturation and very curious

Livestock Conservancy Status: Watch

Check out our heritage turkeys. These are combinations of our breeds here on the farm which produce some fun colors. They can be a combination of Narragansett, Black Spanish and Midget Whites. We generally get gray turkeys from this mix. They are still considered heritage turkeys and all the same attributes apply, just some fun colors.

We find turkeys to be extremely hardy birds and very social. When we are out in the farm yard they are right there following us around. Been here for a farm visit? You have seen our toms showing off and being social. Heritage turkeys prefer to be free ranged and roost as high up as possible. They don't bare confinement well due to their large size and nature. Remember these turkeys can fly. The...

Check out the Narragansett Turkey, a heritage turkey rich in tradition and just an all American breed. Narragansett's are a heritage breed of turkey so they can reproduce. We find turkeys to be hardy birds and often will be roosting out in 5 degree temperatures. They are social birds, when we are out in the farm yard they are right there following us around. Been here for a farm visit? You have seen our toms showing off and being social, always so curious. Heritage turkeys prefer to be free ranged and roost as high up as possible. They don't bare confinement well due to their large size and nature unless adequate space is provided. Remember these turkeys can fly. The hens tend to wander and toms stay close to the food, so always...

About

Looking for a rare, endangered Turkey? Check out the Black Spanish. This is a wonderful turkey that has all the traits you could ask for - calm, social, superior flavor and eye candy here on our farm.

The coloring of the Black Spanish is absolutely gorgeous. It is a lustrous, metallic black with a greenish sheen on top and a dull black under color. The poults and teenagers will often have white or bronze in their feathers but molt into the black color above. Since, however, the Black has not been selected for production attributes for years, many birds may be smaller than the breed standard. In our breeding program we work on weights of our turkeys. While generally known as the Black turkey, the terms "Norfolk Black" and...
